A family run entity, Greier's Publishing features shorter length fiction (novellas) and the occasional full length novel to our readers. By offering fast-paced works at a very economical rate, we feel we fulfill a niche in the literary market akin to the pocket books of the 1950's and the serial works of the 19th century. Amazing characters, interesting plots, and settings that make our readers feel a part of the story are the core elements our authors reach for with every word.

Via paperback, eBook, or audio, we bring to the market true entertainment that'll make readers flip the pages with true anticipation!

Wyvern

The yellowness of the manila tablet strikes the Sheriff as bold under the light of the desk lamp; it's a tale he's reading whilst other tedious Law Enforcement tasks stack suddenly unimportant along the fringes of his desk and mind.

It's the story of those long ago 'Bicentennial Murders'; two dead bodies from back in the 70's when flare leg jeans and long hair ruled the world. The author has died shortly ago, and within the yellow pages, he tells a tale that has the Sheriff reading with haste the events and fullness of the Wyvern Group Home for Boys. With each page, he enters deeper into a world of juvenile delinquents, corrupt administrators, and mayhem that culminates in murder. Bizarre homicides that live within central Idaho as folktales passed down from the aged to the new...

Channel Cats

The catfish are biting with far less enthusiasm than the mosquitos that buzz in a pack overhead; biting on a timeless schedule that remains a mystery to each and every night fisherman who's ever donned a pole and dunked bait in the warm waters a few miles outside Shreveport, Louisiana. The small aluminum tub that's been compared favorably to an actual boat contains two men. One dreams of winning the big Channel Catfish Tournament that's a week away, an annual tournament where he's typically netted the great-grandson of the big catfish that wins 'best overall.' He'd like, just once, to use two hands while bringing his catch to the scales. The other is thinking of his kinda girlfriend, a woman so obsessed with a hidden treasure, he's kinda pondering breaking off their semi-relationship.

But then his line gets a little nudge...

Enter into a world where catfishing and stashed loot blend together into a hilarious tale that'll have you giggling right out loud!

Crowman

Having already taken one of her breasts, Emelia Johanson is crushed that one wasn't enough for the cancer that's invaded her middle-aged body with relentless ferocity. Cancer, in her case, intends to take the whole.

A quiet woman from the upper peninsula of Michigan, Emelia Johanson has spent her lifetime as a quiet 'also ran' along the race of life. One ex-husband (young thing with great thighs and an eager eye on his bank account took him,) and three distant children later, Emelia now finds herself in a battle she can't possibly win but needs to find the courage to fight. And it's with the help of a crowman that Emelia made as a child that she makes her last stand against a world that seldom knew she was even in the game...

You'll root right out loud for Emelia Johanson as she enters a fantasy world where the battle rages amongst the creatures of her backyard, the corn that grows in her field, and the desperate resolution that encompasses her very soul.

Three

(These three novellas from Greiner's Publishing to take a reading mind right where it longs to be.)

WYVERN (The tale of the IDJITS murders)

Clevis Pladstock wants to tell the truth, has wanted to tell the truth for a long time; the bizarre truth pertaining to that double homicide back on the bicentennial. Yes, those two dead bodies and the three innocent men who went to prison for a crime Clevis didn't commit either... a crime so well-orchestrated it could only have come from the mind of a less than innocent child. And, as the final sand escapes from his lifetime, Clevis'll tell you the story of a boys group home, dimes that spin in the air, and an era long since passed.

CHANNEL CATS

The night's air is moist with Louisiana humidity as they take to the warm water in the annual catfishing tournament just outside Shreveport. The moccasins are roaming, the outdated outboard engine refuses to come to life, and two men sit not too far from the shore and hope the channel cats are combing the shallows in search of crayfish. One dreams of winning this year, which would end a life-long string of not even coming close. The other of a buried treasure, a beautiful woman, and catfish that live in the darkened waters of Cyprus Brown Bayou. This hilarious look at the world of men competing with fish, other men, and a pile of loot hidden years earlier will leave you laughing right out loud.

CROWMAN

Emelia Johanson is dying of breast cancer. The small docile woman from the upper peninsula of Michigan now finds herself in a contest she cannot possibly win, but with the help of a decade's old scarecrow from her childhood, she can face her fears and do battle with the evils that have tortured her through her life.

Crowman will leave you rooting out loud for Emilia as she exits the world's stage on her own terms amongst the creatures of her own back yard.

Hallowing Wings

All is not well at the Hallowing Wings Nursing Home of Dennison, Wyoming. No, not well at all. And when one of their fellow residents dies of malnutrition, the others pool their talents, with experience only age can give and the unbridled resolve of youth, to put an end to the evil in their midst...

The Owners:

Angela Milburn is the mother of two with one more on the way. A lifelong resident of Salem, Ohio, Angela has taken upon herself two noble challenges. The first is her son, Jonny, who is currently undergoing chemotherapy for a cancerous brain tumor that was removed early in 2018. The second is the challenge of Greier's Publishing, an entity that she truly enjoys.

Robert W. Greier, Jr. is a resident of the historic city of Hanoverton, Ohio. As an author, Robert uses his lifelong love of history as an intertwining agent in the tales he spins. As an owner, he's the one with worn out soles on his shoes and an undying love for this trade and enterprise.
